Further details

This beautiful island has award-winning beaches, many of which are perfect for a range of water sports, sailing and swimming. We also have quieter beaches alongside dramatic cliffs and others adjacent to areas noted for birds and other wildlife, or rock pools for the whole family to enjoy.

Nature is here in abundance - the richness of our landscape means that you could spend your entire stay taking in the medley of wildflowers and wildlife, visiting our superb gardens and country parks. If you're here for golf, we have courses short and long, dramatic links or peaceful inland venues. We also have extensive facilities for other sports and activities, such as climbing, horse riding and fishing.

If you've come to cycle or walk on the island, you'll find safe and unspoilt routes that will allow you to explore the Island's coast, countryside and small villages.

The Island is home to a wealth of wildlife and nature, and boasts 201km of coastline, 22,000 hectares of Area of Outstanding Natural Beauty, 60 Sites of Special Scientific Interest, which underpin 4 National Nature Reserves, 3 Special Protection Areas and 8 candidate Special Areas of Conservation. There are also 4 local Nature Reserves.

An untouched 125 mile coastline of sandy bays and cliffs, designated an area of 'outstanding' natural beauty. Small seaside resorts with magnificent beaches, family attractions and historic castles.

Attractions include: The Sea Zoo, Beaumaris Castle, Model Village, Butterfly Palace, Horse Riding, Bird Watching, Windsurfing and Diving. The Anglesey Walking Festival is held every summer, with events for every level of ability all over the island. The 70 mile circumnavigation of the island has become a classic challenge for sea kayakers as well as sailors. Kayakers can now make the voyage as part of organised groups. One of the most important finds made by divers off the Isle of Anglesey is the Royal Mary. Owned by King Charles II and sunk in 1675.
